The Chaplain's Corner

The Suit

I pulled out for California; the next day I met a fellow biker from Birmingham Alabama, the day after that I picked up a friend in Roosevelt Oklahoma. On day four we stopped for gas in Grant Arizona, the gas price was outrageous. When I lifted my leg to dismount I got bent out of shape over the hole burnt in a riding suit. My friend saw how upset it made me; we pulled into an auto parts place and repaired the suit.

Once I settled down, Don asked, "Tim what's the big deal over the burned hole?" I sat quiet for a moment, and then started reminiscing out loud. We live on the Pamlico River. I watched my wife in the cold wind picking up pecans several days. I found myself saying why is she so possessed with those pecans? Christmas morning I had a special gift, a snow mobile riding suit. Mrs. Santa Claus didn't have a job. She wanted to earn her own money for my gift. I've worn and hauled that suit for thousands of miles. It blew my mind to know I abused and burned a hole in it on my first trip.

Funny I don't value gifts on their price, but how much effort it took the person to make or acquire it. You know when I realize God loved me enough to die for my sins, and I'm stupid enough to go out sin and abuse that gift, I get upset also. Christmas season, or many times when someone gives me a gift, it makes me thankful that it's His spirit living in my heart that makes me realize I've abused His gift. See you in the wind, and watch those hot pipes.
